Washington, DC – Athlone Global Security Inc. is pleased to announce that its Founder & Co-Chairman, Major-General Doron Almog (Res.), has been awarded by Israel the title of “Knight of Quality Government 2007” in the category of Military and Security. Major-General Almog received this prestigious award in recognition and gratitude for his unique contribution, both in his military service and his civil life, to the defense of the weak and the hopeless and to the strength of Israel’s quality of government and society. In the aftermath of the second Lebanon war, General Almog stood as head of the investigation committee of the kidnapping affair of the two reserve unit soldiers: Goldwasser and Regev, by the Hezbollah organization. In his resolutions he demonstrated courage, decisiveness and integrity and did not evade tough personal conclusions towards those responsible. He courageously stated his opinions in total honesty, and Israel has graciously valued the General’s view.

The General founded Athlone Global Security Israel, and assembled a team world renowned of Israel-based technology and security experts. He played an integral role in bringing Athlone to the U.S. market, and developing a crucial partnership with the Chesapeake Innovation Center, a homeland security company incubator in the DC area. Further, General Almog and his team have been vital in finding our initial five portfolio companies, and are now playing a lead role in the Athlone Global Security LP Fund offering.

About Major-General (Res.) Almog

Major-General (Res.) Doron Almog served 35 active years (1969-2004) in the Israel Defense Forces (IDF). Throughout his military career and during the course of four wars, General Almog has gained tremendous experience in combat and special clandestine operations in the ongoing war against terrorism. In his capacity as a general, he has applied the management principle of "Learning Organization" to the IDF, as well as the practical strategy in limited conflict known as "Cumulative Deterrence Strategy."

General Almog served in all command roles from platoon commander to brigade commander in the prestigious Para brigade, and participated in numerous combat and special clandestine operations. In 1976, he participated in the Entebbe rescue operation as a commander of the Para-Commander unit. In 1983-1985, General Almog participated in operations that brought approximately 6,000 Jews from Ethiopia to Israel, their new home. In 1996, General Almog was appointed head of the IDF’s Doctrine and Training Division, where he pioneered strategy-defining doctrinal seminars and a simulation system. In 2000-2003, he served as head of the IDF's Southern Command, which succeeded in preventing all attempts to breach the security barrier surrounding the Gaza Strip, and was also honored by the International Organization for Standardization for exceptional management.
